Editorial Review

Review

Makerspaces is part of Rowman and Littlefield's Practical Guides for Librarians Series, and this book is just that - a readable, real-world guide aimed at a wide variety of maker-librarians. . . .With its broad focus on all types of libraries, fascinating case studies, and an excellent list of current resources, Makerspaces: A Practical Guide for Librarians is recommended for any aspiring maker-librarian. (Journal of Library Innovation)

John. J. Burke does a good job of explaining the history and background of making and makerspaces. . . .The author's basic purpose and premise for the book are that every library will become a makerspace in one way or another. And he may be right. . . .If you know nothing about makerspaces or if you would like to start one for your library, this book is a good place to start. (Journal of the Medical Library Association)

Rich in insight, chalk full of profiles, this book is the right tool for aspiring maker librarians. (Travis Good, Make: Magazine contributor)

Makerspaces: A Practical Guide for Librarians is aimed at assisting librarians in public, academic, and school libraries to build and grow DIY (do-it-yourself) spaces opportunities in their libraries. Understand the mindset behind the maker movement, learn how to assess patron needs, and create a budget for and equip your own space. The book will provide useful case studies, descriptions of technology, and models for planning and assessing makerspace projects.

About the Author

John J. Burke is principal librarian and director of the Gardner-Harvey Library on the Middletown regional campus of Miami University of Ohio. He is former president of the Academic Library Association of Ohio (ALAO) and former chair of the Southwest Ohio Council on Higher Education (SOCHE) Library Council.
