The Corey Ford Sporting Treasury: Minutes of the "Lower Forty" and Other Treasured Stories By Corey Ford

Rear dust jacket notes: "Millions of readers of Field & Stream magazine remember the late Corey Ford's monthly column, 'The Minutes of the Lower Forty.' Two generations of readers were treated to the diabolical antics of the members of the Lower Forty Shooting, Angling and Inside Straight Club, who held their meetings in - and usually centered their activities around - the fictional yet not-so-imaginary rural town of Hardscrabble, USA. The club members - Doc Hall, Judge Parker, Angus McNab, Colonel Cobb, Cousin Sidney, Dexter Smeed and a few select others - were then and are now personifications of fellow anglers and hunters known to all sportsmen. Meeting at fellow member Uncle Perk's hardware and dry goods store (Jno. Perkins, Prop., Guns & Fshng Tckle Bot Sold & Swopt) the organization hatched many a plot to advance its own aims - mainly to enhance the hunting and fishing opportunities of its members. And now the town of Hardscrabble and its cast of lovable characters are aback where they belong - in the hands of Corey Ford fans. The major portion of The Corey Ford Sporting Treasury, Part I, is a collection of some of the author's best 'Lower Forty' stories. It is preceded by an introduction by Doctor James W. Hall, a close friend who Ford characterized as Hardscrabble's Doc Hall. Part II of the volume contains some of Ford's other well-known articles, some of which originally appeared in Field & Stream, Colliers, and The Saturday Evening Post. They are included in this volume because they are not 'Lower Forty' stories - the stories with which most sportsmen connect Ford - but relate to the reader the author's skills as a serious writer as well as a humorist. The third and final part of this book contains only one story: 'The Road to Tinkhamtown.' This short story is heralded by some as one of the finest pieces of outdoor literature ever written, and, once read, it is one that the reader will probably never forget."
