Editorial Review

Review

"Bavinck organizes his excellent book into three parts. Part I concerns the theory of missions. Here he reviews the nature, foundations, aims, and approach of missions by carefully reviewing Scripture and history. Part II considers the role of elenctics, and Part III addresses the history of missions. . . . For careful exegesis, fidelity to Scripture, and precision, Bavinck cannot be bettered." --The Christian Sociologist

About the Author

Johan Herman Bavinck (1895—1964) was a pastor in the Dutch Reformed Church and a missionary in Indonesia. He was also professor of missions and practical theology at Kampen and Free University in Amsterdam, where his uncle, Herman Bavinck, famously served as professor of dogmatics.
